Quoi adsyn va'n Ghaelg oc ec toshiaght yn eedoo cheead, ayns Skylley Vaayl? Who spoke Manx in Kirk Michael at the beginning of the 20th century?

May 2017

There is some reporting of the census data recording speakers of Manx at the beginning of the 20th century (1901 and 1911) in Broderick (1999: 41-44)¹, and in Manx Notebook (2000)². But the availability of the complete census records for 1901 and 1911, the first two censuses in which a language question was asked ('Manx, English, or both?'), allows us to see just who spoke Manx (that is, was recorded as being able to do so) in those years. To give a flavour of what can be known, I have looked at the census forms for Kirk Michael for both years. No person was recorded as speaking Manx only, so the data reflect those recorded as being able to speak both Manx and English.

Table 1 sets out the numbers of those recorded as Manx speakers, by sex and by decade age spans. In 1911, the recorded population of Kirk Michael was 843 persons, of whom 78 were Manx speakers, i.e. 9.25%. Note equal numbers of men and women, so there is no evidence of a gender bias in the retention or loss of Manx. The decline in Manx knowledge among younger persons is evident enough. Between 1840 and 1870 ever fewer parents were passing on the language to their children, and, to all intents and purposes, no children were acquiring Manx at home after 1870. I return to the two much younger speakers below. Manx knowledge was quite well spread out in the parish. In the 220 households of the parish, 56 had one or more Manx speakers, i.e. 25.45%; but most of these households had only one speaker, so the opportunities for using, or hearing, Manx in the home were very low.

Though the figures for Manx speakers are broken down here by age cohorts, the figures for the whole of each cohort of the Kirk Michael population are not readily available. The right hand part of the table gives the total population figures for each age cohort in 1911 in the island as a whole.³ The number of Kirk Michael Manx speakers in each cohort is expressed as a proportion of this. The decline in proportion of Manx speakers by decade cohort, from those born in the 1820s onward, is striking enough, and would no doubt be very similar in the other parts of the island.

A comparison of the two censuses reveals a striking anomaly. Of the 78 persons recorded as Manx speakers in 1911, 17 (21.79%) were recorded in the 1901 census as knowing English only. This is not a trivial discrepancy. How may we explain it? There are several logical possibilities:

- 1) Seventeen people in Kirk Michael acquired Manx between 1901 and 1911.
- 2) Those filling out the forms understood the language question differently at the two periods.
- 3) The different methods of collecting the census data on the two occasions led to different answers.
- 4) Some people concealed their knowledge of Manx in 1901, but were willing to acknowledge it in 1911.
- 5) Some people falsely claimed knowledge of Manx in 1911, when they had reported honest ignorance in 1901.

These possible explanations are not mutually exclusive. I shall elaborate and review these possible reasons after relating what can be observed in the 1901 census.

Appendix 1 gives the names and other census information of the individuals recorded as Manx speakers in Kirk Michael parish in 1911.

Table 2 (left) sets out the numbers of those recorded in 1901 as Manx speakers, by sex and by decade age spans, in the same way as Table 1. In 1901, out of a total of 928 persons in Kirk Michael parish, 134 were recorded as Manx speakers, or 14.43%. Again, there is no significant gender difference. The decline in Manx acquisition after about 1840 is marked, and, as in the 1911 census, we see that virtually no one acquired Manx after 1870. Of the 216 households in Kirk Michael in 1901, 94 had one or more Manx speakers, i.e. 43.5%. Table 2 (right) gives the published cohort figures for the whole island.

A comparison of individuals in the 1901 and 1911 censuses again reveals a significant anomaly. 14 of the 134 Manx speakers in 1901 (10.45%) were recorded as English-only speakers in the 1911 census. In considering possible explanations for the discrepancy, we may add another possibility to the list of five given above:

6) Fourteen people forgot what Manx they knew between 1901 and 1911.

Appendix 2 gives the names and other census information of the individuals recorded as Manx speakers in Kirk Michael parish in 1901.

How might one account for the discrepancies between individuals' recorded Manx knowledge in the two censuses? I review the possible explanations one by one.

1) Seventeen people in Kirk Michael acquired Manx between 1901 and 1911.

Given what is known about the decline of Manx (Jenner 1876; Broderick 1999)⁶, and the scarcity of opportunities for adult acquisition of Manx at the beginning of the 20th century, despite the development of what we may call antiquarian interest or the 'Celtic revival', acquisition of Manx by adults in Kirk Michael seems most unlikely. Most of those in question were over 50 years old.

2) Those filling out the forms understood the language question differently at the two periods.

In principle, such an explanation might work. As far as I can ascertain, the 1901 form just has a column headed "Language Spoken (children under 3 years of age to be excluded)". Was more specific guidance offered to the enumerators about what that meant? The 1911 form was a bit more explicit: "Language spoken. (1) If able to speak English only, write 'English'. (2) If able to speak Manx only, write 'Manx'. (3) If able to speak English and Manx, write 'Both.' No entry to be made in this column for children under three years of age." But the scope for misinterpreting either question doesn't seem large, particularly as the discrepancy is not all in one direction, that is, similar numbers of people claimed Manx in 1901 but not 1911 as in 1911 but not 1901.

⁷ No commentary is provided to the tabular data in the 1901 census report, or in the 1911 report, which includes no data at all on the language question. There is a brief commentary in the 1921 census report, which states:

No definite rules were laid down as regards the degree of acquaintance with either language which would justify a person to claim or disclaim ability to speak it, and the replies may be expected to vary according to the attitude taken with regard to the assumed subject of the enquiry, e.g., as to whether it was intended to elucidate the extent of the habitual use of one or both languages or whether it was designed from a literary or educational standpoint."

⁶ Jenner, Henry (1876) The Manx language: its grammar, literature, and present state. Transactions of the Philological Society 1875 [16], 172-196.

Broderick, George (1999) Language Death in the Isle of Man. Tübingen: Niemeyer.

[&]quot;A question which was not dealt with in the 1911 Census Report, but which is in continuation of a similar enquiry made in 1901, asked in respect of each person aged 3 or over whether he or she was able to speak Manx, English, or both Manx and English.

3) The different methods of collecting the census data on the two occasions led to different answers.

In 1901, as in all the previous censuses, the census data was collected by an enumerator (it must have been orally, sometimes, at least) and transferred to a fair copy schedule which is what was alone retained. Respondents will have been aware that their answers would be seen by a known individual, even if discretion was assured, so there may have been some inclination to avoid answers that might be accompanied by shame or embarrassment, of which 'knowledge of Manx' might have been one. In 1911, an individual form was completed by each householder; occasionally they were amended afterwards by the enumerator or processors of the data. This procedure might have favoured more honest answers. But, again, the fact that the discrepancy in Manx reporting is of the same order in each direction doesn't favour the idea that the 1911 procedure elicited more honesty than the 1901 one.

- 4) Some people concealed their knowledge of Manx in 1901, but were willing to acknowledge it in 1911.
- 5) Some people falsely claimed knowledge of Manx in 1911, when they had reported honest ignorance in 1901.

These two explanations are similar in principle —that some people changed their minds about whether they wished to acknowledge, or claim, knowledge of Manx; the difference is whether the 'true' answer is 'knows Manx', in which case there was concealment on one occasion but not the other, or 'does not know Manx', in which case there was a false claim on one occasion but not the other. In the cultural context of the time, and in rural Kirk Michael, probably concealment is more likely than over-claiming, and it may be that inconsistent concealment of the truth is the most likely account of the discrepancy. However, this 'explanation' hardly goes beyond a reformulation, in different language, of the observed discrepancy. Of those who may have consistently (on both occasions) concealed their Manx knowledge, we have, of course, no evidence.

6) Fourteen people forgot what Manx they knew between 1901 and 1911.

Explanation (6) is, perhaps, not inherently unlikely; that is, people who assented to knowledge of Manx in 1901, may, by 1911, having practised it little, if at all, in the meantime, have felt their knowledge of Manx was so limited as no longer to be worth recording. But then some entirely different explanation is required for those who claimed Manx in 1911 but not in 1901. The anomalies remain thoroughly puzzling. One should at least investigate whether a similar phenomenon occurs in other parts of the island.

1911 census results: If we add the 13 people in Kirk Michael who had Manx in 1901 but recorded only English in 1911, namely, Eliza Caine, Emily Caine, James Caine, John Charles Caine, Thomas Caine, Ann Cannell, Evan Cannell, William James Corlett, Eleanor Crowe, Mary Ann Curphey, Alfred Kelly, Anna Quayle, Catherine Quirk, the total for Manx speakers in 1911 rises to 91, or 10.79%.

1901 census results: If we add the 12 people living in Kirk Michael in 1901 who had Manx in 1911 but recorded only English in 1901, viz. Jane Caine, Ann Cannell, Thomas Cannell, Jane Clinton, Elisa Jane Cormode, Rebecca Cottier, William Cowley, William Ellison, John James Kaighin, Ann Killip, Isabella Kissack, Robert Quayle; the total for Manx speakers in Kirk Michael 1901 is 146, or 15.73%.

Some stories

In 1911 Isabella Browne (nee Christian), a widow aged 83, a Manx speaker, was residing at Ballalonna, Michael. She had grown up in Ballakeigh, Bride, a farmer's daughter, and had married John Mearns Browne, a farmer, in 1854. They had lived at Ballacottier, Andreas, and at Aust, Lezayre. By 1901 they were living at Gat-e-Whing, Andreas, where she and John Mearns Browne were recorded as English speakers. What brought her to Kirk Michael, where she had never lived before, in 1911? Well, in 1907 her husband had died, and was buried in Andreas. Their daughter Isabella Browne (1868-1946) had married, in 1895, John Hadden Corjeag, farmer and miller, the heir of Ballalonna farm, Michael, and of Kerrowcruin Mill, at the mouth of Glen Wyllin, now lost to the sea. So in 1911 Isabella Browne, was living with her daughter and son-in-law, Isabella and John Hadden Corjeag, at Ballalonna, together with John Hadden's widowed father, William Henry Corjeag, John Hadden's niece, Nora C. Moss, a teenage servant Amy Kneale, and a teenage cowman, James Quayle. Apart from Isabella Browne, William Henry Corjeag was the only Manx speaker. John Hadden, the Ballalonna heir, and Isabella Corjeag (nee Browne) had no children. In due course, Ballalonna passed to the Cannells, descendants of William Henry Corjeag's sister Maria, who married William Cannell.

The young Manx speakers in 1911.

May Mc Knight, aged 17, a domestic servant, born Ramsey, was living with her uncle William Brew, Manx speaker, aged 67, and aunt Ellen Maria Brew (English) at White House Cottage, Kirk Michael village. William Brew, a farm horseman, was from Andreas, and Ellen Maria from Ballaugh. I haven't found any more about May Mc Knight. At any rate, it is exceptional for her to have been acquiring Manx, in Ramsey, or anywhere on the island, in the 1890s.

Hilda Faragher, aged 15, a farmer's daughter engaged in dairy work, was living with her parents, James and Jane Faragher, three older siblings, and a 2-year-old niece, at Kerrowglass. Her father was a farmer from Santon; her mother and the rest of the family were born in Malew. Only Hilda and her mother were Manx speakers. Ten years previously, the family had been at Ballavoddan, Malew, and only her mother had been recorded as Manx speaker. Exceptionally, Hilda appears to have acquired Manx from her mother, in Malew, in the 1890s, though her elder siblings had not.

Daniel Henry Caine, baptized St Luke's, Baldwin, 16 Feb. 1862, son of William and Ellen (or Eleanor, nee Corlett), grew up in Braddan, but by 1881 was living with his family at Eary, Michael, where his father farmed 130 acres. In 1901, he, his widowed mother (aged 83), and his older sister and brother, like him, unmarried, were all recorded as Manx speakers. It is likely that Eary was one of the few Manx-speaking households in Kirk Michael at this time. By 1911, his older brother James, married to Elizabeth, with their 5 children, had joined Daniel at Eary, though now Daniel was the only Manx speaker noted there. Danny Caine was among those last native speakers whose voices were recorded in the early 1950s (he died in 1952), by Yn Çheshaght Ghailckagh, and the only speaker from Kirk Michael. The Manx he remembered was limited and rather rusty; he probably hadn't called it to mind for 50 years. Among the recordings of his Manx transcribed by Broderick (1984: 1.310-11) ⁸ are the following sayings:

Jean shiu red ennagh dy nowmain thie.

Gow kiarail jeh (sic) hene nagh bee shiu goit stiagh.

Trog seose yn lhiannoo raad lhisagh oo (sic) goll, as tra bee eh shenn cha jean eh çhyndaa woish.

Poosee son graih as obbyr son argid. Ny yeih, bee shickyr nagh cur graih raad nagh vel veg.

⁸ Broderick, George (1984-86) A Handbook of Late Spoken Manx, 3 vols. Tübingen: Niemeyer.

William Killip, of Clyeen, 1901 and 1911, farmer, was the son of William Killip and Isabella Kegg, baptized in Ballaugh 16 Oct. 1834, and buried 22 Aug. 1922 in Kirk Michael, aged 88. In the 1841 census he is to be found at Ballakiney, Ballaugh, but by 1851 the family had moved to Clyeen, Michael, where William Killip Sr. farmed 34 acres. On 26 Aug 1861 William Killip Jr. had married Mary Ann Corlett, and they had a son, William E[dwin] C[orlett] Killip, baptized 7 Dec. 1862. In 1871, already widowed, William Jr. was farming 66 acres at Shalghaige, Michael, where he lived with his son, mother-in-law Ann Corlett, sister-in-law Christian Corlett, and with Louisa Crellin, general servant, and John B. Corlett, farm servant. By 1881 he was back at Clyeen, now farming 100 acres, living with his son, his widowed mother, and 3 servants. By 1891 he had remarried, to Ann Cannan, (of Peel, married 4 Nov. 1882); they continued to live at Clyeen with his son William E C Killip, and a servant Elizabeth J C Cleator, who we know from the 1901 and 1911 censuses was a Manx speaker. The household was the same in 1901, where both Ann Killip and William E C are down as having only English. However, in 1911, with the same household, Ann Killip now admits to having Manx. William Killip of Clyeen was one of the Manx speakers visited by the Welsh linguist John Rhŷs (1841-1915) on several occasions between 1888 and 1891 in connexion with his studies of Manx pronunciation, as recorded in Rhŷs's notebooks (Broderick 2015). Rhŷs made the following observation about William Killip's Manx (Broderick 2015, note 331):

"He [William Killip, Clyeen, Michael, b. 1833/34] does not understand it to make any difference of sense whether you say beg for veg for instance after [uʒag] (ushag), and he would talk of the sun as [e:] and not [i:] although he would call it y ghrian with the mutation for the feminine; but the sense of gender is almost gone in the Manx speakers of the present day as I am convinced by my talk with Mr. Killip who is one of the best readers I have heard of his language."

Another of those from whom Rhŷs collected Manx data was James Cannell (1816-1903), the parish clerk of Kirk Michael. Rhŷs records in his notebooks:

"In the north I had daily lessons of the same kind from Mr. Cannell, clerk of Michael Church [...]" (1888) (Rhŷs 1895: vi). "During my stay in the north I read also with Mr. Cannell of Kirk Michael [...]" (1890) (Rhŷs 1895: vi). "I had readings also with Mr. Cannell [...] before leaving" (1892). "[...] I had read with [...] Mr. Cannell of Kirk Michael [...]" (1893) (Rhŷs 1895: vii) (Broderick: 2015: 24).

In 1851, James Cannell, tailor, aged 35, was living near Ballarhenny, Michael, with his wife Ann (nee Caley), also 35, from Ballaugh, and with their four daughters Sarah (10)¹⁰, Elizabeth (7)¹¹, Ann (4)¹² and Isabella (1)¹³. By 1861, they had a son, Thomas, now aged (9)¹⁴, but Sarah, Elizabeth and Ann are not present (Sarah and Elizabeth in service elsewhere in the village). In 1871, the only children at home, now at Rhencullen, are Thomas (19), blacksmith, and a daughter Eliza (16)¹⁵ who was not present at the 1861 census. In 1881, James has relinquished tailoring, and is now church clerk, and an agricultural labourer; all the children are gone. By 1891 his occupation is recorded just as parish clerk, as also in 1901, when the language question registers James and Ann as Manx speakers. James died in 1903, and was buried in Kirk Michael churchyard on 22 Feb.

In 1911, John Thomas Corkill, 48, farmer, of Cammall, Michael, completed the census form declaring himself, his wife Elizabeth A[nn, nee Kinvig], and three teenage children, John Kinvig, Annie and Bessie all as speakers of both Manx and English. The enumerator evidently concluded this was a mistake, and corrected to English in every case. However, comparison with the 1901 census implies that John Thomas himself, at least, should have been recorded as a Manx speaker, as he was in 1901, though then the other members of the family had English only. In 1901, the daughters' full names are Emily Annie, and Kath. Bessie. In 1891, the young couple, not yet with a family, are farming at Kennaa, German; they had married in Peel on 27 Nov 1889. In 1881, John Thomas, aged 18, was with his parents Edward and Elizabeth and six siblings, at Ballahimmin, German, where Edward Corkill farmed 137 acres, and similarly in 1871, though the farm was smaller.

The two youngest Manx speakers in Michael in 1901 are two women in their 20s, both living at Ballaleigh. Alma Quayle, 26, is the wife of John W[illiam] Quayle, 31, also a Manx speaker, as also are an older couple, William and Elizabeth Quayle, —John W's parents, though the relationship is not spelt out. ¹⁶ Their young Manx-speaking domestic servant is Christian [Ann] Caley, 24, of Ballaugh. Christian Ann is one of the nine children of John and Catherine Caley, farming in Ballaugh in 1891. In 1881 the family (smaller) is at Ballavolley, Ballaugh, near Ballacrye. She was baptized in Ballaugh on 7 Sep. 1877. She will have been one of the few acquiring Manx at home in the 1870s. We lose track of her after 1901. Alma Quayle was born Alma Christian; she was the daughter of Evan Christian and Anne Hampton, who lived at Ballamena, German, and was baptized in St John's, Kirk German on 24 May 1874; she married John William Quayle in Peel on 14 Aug. 1894. By 1911 Alma Quayle was a widow with four children, farming at Ballamenagh, Michael. Now she is recorded as speaking English only, as are the children, unsurprisingly. But in 1901 you might well have heard Manx in the Quayle household, with five Manx speakers present.

In the appendices extracted from the 1911 and 1901 censuses that follow, the order is that of the households as surveyed. If you wish to find a particular name or place, [Ctrl+F] will bring up a search box.

¹⁶ John William Quayle, son of William and Elizabeth Quayle, of Ballaleigh, was baptized on 1 Aug. 1869 in Kirk Michael.
